Giving Gifts That Count . . . and Keep Giving
Curt B. Witcher

Well . . . it's that time again! The holiday season is upon us! And if your Thanksgiving weekend was remotely similar to mine, the turkey was scarcely thawed let alone cooked and carved before you were inundated with the seasonal commercials encouraging all to "buy, Buy, BUY!" Indeed, many subscribe to the notion that "buy" must come before "give." And after all, this is the season of giving, right?

I have an alternative posture for you to consider. As you and I have a profound appreciation for our families' heritages, most individuals also have a keen interest in knowing more about their families' histories and in particular about those parts of the past that relate directly to them--that directly touch their lives. Hence, instead of buying a gift for family this holiday season, consider making a gift.

Take those few (or few dozen!) old family photographs and scan them on to a CD-ROM disk and give a gift of history and heritage to your family members. What about including scanned images of early marriage and christening records, or maybe even school papers, newspaper clippings, and military records with those photographs? How about taking a few moments, perhaps even up to an hour or so, and write down a special early memory from your youth or younger years that your children and grandchildren might find interesting. It could be a recollection of holiday times when you were growing up. It could be your recollections of your first job or your experiences in the military. It could literally be your first anything--from a first "A" in school or a first date to a first crop ever harvested or the birth of a first child. Your memories, and the gift of your history, will definitely rank among the most prized gifts of the holiday season. You'll be amazed!

And if you'd still like to find a neat place to spend a little holiday money, I suggest you consider contributing to the Historical Genealogy Endowment Fund. Like the gift suggestions above, it too is the gift that keeps giving. For more than forty years, the department has grown into a national family history research center. The materials collected, preserved, and made available to researchers here in Fort Wayne are truly exceptional. To continue that tradition of excellence well into the twenty-first century, a robust endowment will be critically important.

There are several attractive aspects to endowment funds structured as ours is structured. First, the principal given--the original money gift-- remains intact forever. Only the interest generated from the gift is spent. So truly, a gift to the Historical Genealogy Endowment Fund keeps on giving year after year. Second, no gift is too small. If all the subscribers to this e-zine, for example, gave just one dollar, more than ten thousand dollars would be generating interest to acquire resources for future generations of users. Finally, contributions to library endowment funds are tax deductible.

Please know that the staff and volunteers of the Historical Genealogy Department join the rest of the Allen County Public Library family in wishing you a wonderful holiday season!

Confederate Pension Application Sources Available in the Reynolds Historical Genealogy Collection, Part 2

By Delia Cothrun Bourne

In 1885, Florida started granting pensions to Confederate veterans, then in 1889, began to include widows. They are indexed in Virgil White's Register of Florida CSA Pension Applications (973.74 F66W). The citations in this index include application number, veteran's name, regiment, wife's maiden name, date and county of application, and the number of pages in the application. It has a separate index of maiden names. One can also view the Florida Confederate pension applications online at the Florida Department of State site at <http://dlis.dos.state.fl.us/barm/pensionfiles.html>. This site also provides a list of the applications by number, and an index by the veteran's surname or widow's maiden name.

The first Confederate pensions in Georgia were given in 1879, and widows started receiving pensions in 1891. The Historical Genealogy Department owns the pension applications as well as supplemental applications on 498 rolls of microfilm, arranged by county with the applicants in alphabetical order within each county. An every name index to the applications exists on 39 rolls of microfilm, also owned by the Historical Genealogy Department, which cites the veteran's name, regiment and company on each card. Another index to these pension records, in book form, is Virgil D. White's Index to Georgia Civil War Confederate Pensions (GC 975.8 W5827IN). The index citation includes name of veteran and/or widow, regiment and company. Since this index also includes citations for witnesses to claims, it encompasses more than just pensioners. The Department also owns an index to the supplemental applications, Ted O. Brooke and Linda Woodward Geiger's Index to Georgia's Confederate Pension Supplements (GC 975.8 B795IN). The citations in this index include name of veteran or widow, county of residence, and location of document (series and box numbers). Some actual pensions are available for viewing online at <http://docuweb.gsu.edu/scripts/webmain.dll?Anonymous>

In 1912, the Kentucky State Legislature passed an act giving state pensions to disabled and indigent Confederate soldiers and widows. The original pension applications are housed at the Kentucky Department of Libraries and Archives in Frankfort, and microfilm copies exist at the Kentucky State Historical Society Library and Pogue Library at Murray State College. It is Stephen Douglas Lynn's Confederate Pensioners of Kentucky: Pension Applications of the Veterans & Widows 1912-1946 (GC 976.9 L993co) provides an index to these applications. The index lists name, regiment and company, birth date and place, current county of residence, and year of application. Widows' entries also include her maiden name, date and place of birth, and date and place of death of the veteran. This volume also includes a listing of pensioners by county of residence, and one by state and regiment of service.

Louisiana began granting pensions to indigent Confederate veterans or widows in 1898. The applications and an index are available on microfilm at the Louisiana Division of Archives in Baton Rouge. The Historical Genealogy Department owns this set on 152 rolls of microfilm. The Louisiana State Archives has an index of these pension applications available on their website at www.sec.state.la.us/archives/gen/cpa-index.htm.

Compiled Records Showing Service of Military Units in Volunteer Union Organizations
[NARA Microfilm Publication M-594]

Timothy Dougherty

American Civil War researchers will not want to miss National Archives Microfilm Publication M-594, Compiled Records Showing Service of Military Units in Volunteer Union Organizations. This is an often-untapped resource that may allow the researcher to better understand an ancestor's experience in the American Civil War.

The series consists of hand-written cards giving service histories of units in volunteer Union organizations. The records were compiled beginning in 1890, with great attention given to accuracy. It is important to note that this series does not contain information on individual soldiers. Rather, it contains information on the "stations, movements, or activities" of each unit. Often, content is included on the unit's organization and composition, strengths, losses and disbandment. The material will also sometimes list names of commanding officers, dates the units were mustered in and out, and the terms of service. To put it simply, these are brief unit histories, showing where the units were and what they were doing.

The arrangement of the collection is simple. It is generally grouped alphabetically by state or territory. Within the state or territory, it is further subdivided by unit type (cavalry, artillery, infantry, etc) and then by unit number. Within the unit, records are grouped by company. At the conclusion of the state and territorial units are units raised directly by the federal government: U.S. Colored Troops, U.S. Volunteers, U.S. Reserve Corps and other organizations, each broken down into its subdivisions.

For example, if a researcher knows that an ancestor served with Co. B of the 1st Minnesota Infantry, the corresponding reel reveals that the unit was stationed in Washington from April 29th to July of 1861, and in Camp Stone, MD from July through December of 1861. In January and February of 1862, it was at Harpers Ferry, and so on. Looking on, the researcher will discover that the unit was engaged in action at the battles of Gettysburg, Petersburg and other places. Though individual soldiers are not listed or named, it may place an ancestor at a given place or battle, depending on when he served with the unit.

This material augments other Civil War sources housed in the Historical Genealogy Department of the Allen County Public Library. It enhances the Compiled Service Record indices and records by providing detail not found therein. It also supplements the Civil War Unit Histories series on microfiche (dealt with in a previous article in this newsletter). The information found in this series is much more brief and less detailed than the Unit Histories series, but it includes many units that the Unit Histories set does not.

In short, this collection is a rare treat for Civil War researchers.

SUBMISSIONS BEING ACCEPTED FOR THE NEW ALLEN COUNTY, INDIANA HISTORY BOOK

Do you have or are you an Allen County, Indiana family? At this time of year, treasured stories of family members, events, and family history are common conversation. Here is an opportunity to share those family stories and become a part of history.

The Allen County Genealogical Society of Indiana and the Allen County-Fort Wayne Historical Society have joined forces to compile and publish a new Allen County History Book.

The purpose in publishing the book is to preserve Allen County's unique heritage through the participation of local residents, businesses, churches, schools, clubs and organizations as well as individuals that have Allen County ties. There is no better time than the present to preserve your family's Allen County history and to ensure that the history of the county is not lost or forgotten over the years.

Submitted biographies of families, businesses or organizations, tributes and memorials for Allen county residents, both living and deceased, will be gladly accepted. In addition to the biographies, the book will contain a definitive narrative history of Allen County (including Fort Wayne).

The Genealogical Society and the Historical Society want to include your family biography in this very important book. They are currently accepting biographies. If you are living in Allen County, Indiana, or have previously resided here, or had family reside here, please send a double spaced typed biography of 500 words or less to: History Book Project, PO Box 5192, Fort Wayne, IN 46895. One photo (no larger than 8x10) may also be included at no charge. Or, you may email your submission to: info@allencountyhistorybook.com. The deadline for submitting material is April 1, 2005. Biographies or histories longer than 500 words will be charged 15 cents for each extra word.

For further information, and to see a sample of what your submission will look like, visit the Allen County History Book website: www.allencountyhistorybook.com
